Why are we here? (part four)

On our own doorstep was the Rev. William Grimshaw at Haworth. Originally as most clergy, he was opposed to John Wesley, until he heard him preach in Keighley and from then on he made Haworth the centre of Methodism for almost the whole of northern England. His stipend was in the hands of trustees who resisted attempts by the church to unseat him but he had the support of the Archbishop of York. William knew that at his death whoever took over would have to toe the line so with some money left to him for that purpose plus his own considerable wealth (he was a bachelor) he built a Methodist Church (1758). There was now a big turn of events, it was never used as a Church. Methodist membership was down to only eight and Haworth was now dominated by Wesley's arch opponents, the Baptists. In the event of Wesley's death, Grimshaw would have taken his place, but John outlived him.
